

Stylish success for hairdressing pupil

ASPIRING hairdressers are being urged to follow in the scissor snips of one of Brisbane School of Hairdressing's top pupils Nick Chen who recently won QueensPlaza's Avant-Garde Competition to discover Brisbane's next big star.

Mr Chen, also an emerging make-up artist and fashion designer, is about to complete his Certificate III in Hairdressing at the school.

One of 15 Avant-Garde Competition finalists, he won via images of hairstyles he had created and will now get the chance to meet fashion designer Leona Edmiston in Sydney and assist in the QueensPlaza spring/summer 2010 campaign photo shoot.

And by enrolling at the accredited hairdressing college, others can fast-track their hairdressing career by finishing their formal qualifications in under a year.

In fact, BSH effectively halves the duration of a traditional hairdressing apprenticeship, says spokeswoman Amanda Wood.

Up to 500 student hairdressers and apprentices are enrolled this year, with new course submissions taken every two months.

"Brisbane School of Hairdressing has been training hairdressers for more than 35 years and were the first private hairdressing college established in Queensland," Ms Wood said.

"Courses range from a Certificate III in Hairdressing – you can complete in under a year, and a Diploma in Hairdressing Management, which is an 82-week course.

"We have a really great reputation in the industry and we pride ourselves on making sure all our hairdressers are job-ready and employable, with top-notch skills."
